Linguistic & Language Processing

This course provides a Masters-level overview of linguistics as a cornerstone of cognitive science. The first half of the course provides a quick introduction to linguistics. The second half focuses on central questions from linguistics, language development, and language processing as a window into the relationship between language and cognition. The course is designed for first semester students in the Masters in Cognitive Science. It is also suitable for Masters Computer Science students doing the Nebenfach in Psychology and Linguistics.

Time:
see KIS: Sozialwissenschaften/Psycholinguistik und Sprachentwicklung; Prof. Dr. Shanley Allen